MEMORIAL IN HONOR OF THEO. ROOSEVELT

Servicer Held in Local Church Sunday Evening With an Appropriate Program

The Community Memorial to Ex-president Roosevelt was held in the Methodist church Sunday evening was pronounced a choice affair. A good sized and very appreciative audience was present. The program rendered was simple, strong and sincere, like the man under consideration, the speaker measured fully up to his subject. Taken altogether, it was a great evening. Mr. Roosevelt's favorite hymn, "How Firm a Foundation Ye Saints of The Lord," was heartily sung by the audience. The prayer by Rev. Mr. Brown of the Episcopal church was choice, meeting a ready response in the minds and hearts of the people present. Prof. Myers, taking the place of Miss Beegers who was detained on account of sickness, rendered effectively Herbert Johnson's "Face to Face." Mr. George A. Merrill presented an appropriate resolution to be signed by the co-operating societies and sent to Mrs. Roosevelt. Mr. Merrill prefaced the presentation by a brief appreciation, and characterization of Mr. Roosevelt:

A statesman rather than a politician, though ever on the political firing line. He had political acumen, but he was scrupulous as to methods. He was a diplomat, but would not stoop to the cunning and dark ways of the diplomat. His rugged honesty and sincerity would not allow it. A statesman must possess absolute singlenesss of purpose, perfect independence, complete absence of selfishness and subservance, heroic courage. "Theodore Roosevelt is among the few Americans within the period of our national history who have measured up to this exacting standard of statesmanship." The resolution was heartily seconded by Judge Buck, and is as follows:

RESOLUTION

This day having been set apart in order that all the people of the United States of America may comemorate the life and work of the late Theodore Roosevelt, the people of Redwood City, in the state of California, have met as a single body in one of its principal places of worship, that we may pay proper homage and respect to a man to whom we are indebted for so much that is good and great in our present national life.

Recognizing the futility of trying to embody in a single resolution an adequate estimate of the man or of his work, be it resolved that we humbly record our recognition and appreciation of his worth and greatness by according to him in our hearts, and in the hearts of our children, the merited honor of immortal companionship with George Washington, the father of his country, and Abraham Lincoln, its savior. Signed by—

P. P. Chamberlain, representing the G. A. R.

Mrs. Geo. Winters, representing the Relief Corps.

Mrs. A. Kincaid, representing the Red Cross.

Mrs. Chas. Haiser, representing the Womans' Club.

Captain Lambert, representing the Home Guards.

C. A. Parker, representing the Ministers' Conference.

Prof. B. E. Myers, representing the Community Council.

Mark E. Ryan, representing the Town Trustees.

Geo. W. McNulty, representing the Town Trustees.

The speaker of the evening was introduced in a few very choice and appropriate words, by Mr. Chrales Helser.

The address of Samuel Shortridge was pronounced by those who had heard him many times his most masterful oration. It was a great subject and he fully measured up to it. Only the briefest outline can here be given. He sketched hurriedly Mr. Roosevelt's early career as a student and as a young man seeking health in the great unconventional West. Then he took up his work as a public servant—in the New York legislature when only twenty-three years old, police commissioner in the city of New York, assistant secretary of navy at the beginning of the Spanish war, gallant soldier in Cuba, governor of New York, vice-president and president. "Wondrous man" was the term he applied to him at this point. He characterized him as a man of action and also a man of books, of thought; a great and far-seeing statesman. Mr. Roosevelt was a man of political party, but above party; indeed, coming very near being elected a third time to the presidency without a party, or a party formed over night. One of his great achievements, by which he will be known and honored as long as the Pacific and the Atlantic oceans surge against our shores, was the building of the Panama canal; an undertaking that nations and corporations before him had tried, and failed in. America has had no citizen in the present generation who so intensely loved and served his country as did Mr. Roosevelt. He was watchful of her interest and her reputation. When the "world war" broke out, he was the first to cry for preparedness. When the Lusitania went down it was his "strident voice" that called loudly for action. And when America finally declared for war, he was among the first to offer his services to fight on European soil, and if need be to die there. Enthusiastically he gave up to the services of his country his four sons—all he had. And when his baby boy, who was dearer to him than his own life fell in battle among the clouds, he met the terrible blow with courageous resignation; with no word of complaint or regret. And in the shadows of that great loss, his own life dropped away. Mr. Roosevelt was a man great in integrity and purity of character, great in love for his country and for his own, great in action and great in thought; a man standing "four square" in perfect poise, the great American of his day.

LOFTUS AND O'LEARY OUT ON PROBATION

James Loftus and Timothy O'Leary were admitted to probation in the superior court for six months on Thursday by Judge Buck. The Loftus youth was present in court with his mother while Young O'Leary was represented by his father, Timothy O'Leary. The court some days ago permitted the young man to go to sea. Both young men will have to report to the court every month for a period of six months.

On New Year's night a boy named McGlennan stole an automobile in San Francisco and invited four boys to ride with him to San Bruno. They were O'Leary, Loftus, Barry and Code. At San Bruno McGlennan was shot and killed by a nightwatchman. The other boys were arrested. The O'Leary boy and Young Loftus as well as the other two were innocent of any crime, though they were technically guilty according to legal ethics. Code and Barry failed to appear on Thursday afternoon and the court made an order directing that they appear in court on February 20th. Young Loftus by his manly bearing and frank expression made an impression on the court as did the father of Young O'Leary. These two young men were ably represented by Attorney Eugene F. Conlin of San Francisco ,who spoke feelingly of the good character and standing of the two families of the accused.

THE WEEK'S EVENTS IN LOCAL CIRCLES

Sergeant W. R. Dean was buried in Union cemetery on Thursday morning with full military honors. A firing squad of eight soldiers from Camp Fremont were present together with eight more who acted as pallbearers. Sergeant Dean left Camp Fremont with an artillery corps some time ago for the east. He was taken sick with pneumonia at Hoboken, New Jersey and passed away in a hospital there on February 4th. The remains arrived here on Tuesday nast. Mrs. Dean resides in Redwood City.

William Maloney arrived in Redwood City from Camp Lewis on Wednesday evening and was greeted by his relatives and friends. He was given a reception at the home of B. J. Stafford on Stambaugh street. There he met many of his old friends and former associates to whom he related his thrilling experience in France. He was attached to the 364 infantry of the 91st division and had received orders to move up to the front line when the armistice was signed. The next day after the war closed he would have been in the midst of the fighting. Mr. Maloney will be mustered out of the service at the Presidio within a few days. He left here last April and a few months later went to France.

Ensign John McCrea, son of Mr and Mrs. S. P. McCrea of this city, has been transferred to short duty at New York. He has been on the steamer Mallory plying between Bordeau and New York. His new duties will be more pleasing than his sea work. Mr. McCrea will soon ask for his discharge.

There will be an entertainment in conjunction with the mass meeting to be held on the evening of February 22, at the San Carlos school house. Clarence Haydock has been appointed temporary chairman and Mrs. M. Steward community song leader.

A train load of soldiers en route from Camp Kearny to the Presidio stopped in Redwood City for ten minutes last Sunday morning. Louis Uhlenberg was one of the boys and he joyfully greeted parents and friends as the stop was made less than a block from his home. Louis expects to be discharged from the service next week.

Miss Myra Williamson one of the most popular young ladies of Pescadero spent this week here as the guest of her friend, Miss Muryl Blomquist.

Lloyd Sweet who has been in the U. S. navy for the past eight months received his honorable discharge and with Miss Sweet is visiting Mrs. Sweet's parents, Mr. and Mrs. M. Simmons.

The local schools began their spring term on Monday with fine enrollments. There were several new students at Sequoia Union High School and a number of beginning pupils at the primary schools and kindergartens. Miss Freda Barg is the only new teacher in the department. She was chosen to take charge of an over-flow class of Fifth and Sixth grade pupils.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Agrotti are rejoicing over the birth of a baby daughter last Sunday. Mrs. Agrotti and her little girl are getting along nicely.

Harry Holmquist young son of R. C. Holmquist, had a narrow escape from serious injury Monday when he was run over by an automobile. The machine knocked him down and passed over his body. For a time he was thought to be badly hurt but on the next day it was found that outside of some bruises he was not badly injured.

The Ladies Circle of the Congregational church held their annual business meeting Wednesday and elected the following officers who will serve the society this year. President, Mrs. F. L. Blomquist; vice-president, Mrs. Robert Brown; secretary, Mrs. W. O. Dodge; treasurer, Mrs. L. P. Behrens.

Mr. and Mrs. L. P. Behrens left on Wednesday for Byron Springs where they will spend two weeks. Mr. Behrens had a slight attack of rheumatism and wished to eradicate it before it had a chance to bother him.

Assemblyman Eskward was in town on Thursday calling on friends. Mr. Eskward had just returned from the Sacramento having attended the first session of the legislature. Mr. Eskward says that he was much pleased with the bills that were passed and the legislature enacted by the members.

MRS. MARY READ PASSES TO BEYOND

Early yesterday morning Mrs. Mary Read, wife of John J. Read, passe daway at her home on Redwood avenue following an illness of a little over a week. On Wednesday evening of last week, Mrs. Read was attending the installation ceremonies of Bonita Parlor, N. D. G. W., when she suffered a stroke of apoplexy. She became unconscious and despite the best medical assistance she did not rally, neither did she regain consciousness. She slowly sank until the end came at about 9:30 o'clock yesterday morning. Her death is a severe shock to her family and her friends.

Mrs. Read was a native of San Francisco, aged 55 years. She was a graduate of the State Normal school at San Francisco, but never taught. Mrs. Read had been a resident of Redwood City for over 20 years, during which time she endeared herself to a large circle of friends.

Mrs. Read was a prominent member of Bonita Parlor, N. D. G. W., being its past president and at the time of her death was the secretary of the Parlor. She also was a past president of General Geo. S. Evans Relief Corps and for ten years acted as secretary of the corps. Mrs. Read took a deep interest in her work, always at her post doing what she could for her soicety and always helping those in distress. Mrs. Read was beloved by everyone for her numerous acts of kindness and deeds of charity.

Mrs. Read was a devoted wife and mother. She made many sacrifices for her family, through her efforts five of her daughters were given a normal school education, all becoming teachers of ability.

She will be sadly missed from the family circle, her motherly advice and endearing terms of love will be heard no more by those who were near and dear to her.

No date has been set for the funeral. Two of her daughters are living in the east and the burial will not take place until they arrive. They have been notified and probably will arrive here on Tuesday next.

Besides her husband, Mrs. Read is survived by the following children: Mrs. Philip S. Holden, Mrs. Fred W. Morley, Mrs. William D. Parker, Mrs. L. R. Gillett, John J. Read Jr., Carolyn T. Read, Frederick J. Read, Gertrude Read and Alma Read. The two boys served in the war and were recently mustered out of the service.

BIG MASS MEETING IN THE SEQUOIA THEATRE

One of the biggest nights of Redwood City will be February 22nd. That night in the Sequoia Theatre, under the auspices of the Community Council a monster mass meeting will be held for the purpose of welcoming home the boys from service and paying due tribute to those who have lost their lives. There will be considerable community singing, two good speakers and at least one run of films Committees have been appointed to arrange for the theatre, program, nominations, etc. A feature of the eveniny will be the escort of the Home Guards. It will be necessary to pay for the theatre and it is desired that as many in Redwood City contribute as possible. It is likely a number of the High School boys will be given the opportunity to solicit the contributions. If they approach you, do your bit.

BRCHBISHOP HANNA BUYS FINE BUILDING

K. of C. Building at Camp Fremont to be Moved to Belmont City

The Knights of Columbus building at Camp Fremont was sold during the week to Archbishop Hanna who will remove it to the Belmont school. The building was among the first to be erected at Camp Fremont for camp activities at a cost of $12,000. The Y. M. C. A. building was built across the way, both having splendid locations and both worked together in the interest of the soldiers. The secretaries worked in harmony and as a result no cantonment in the United States gave better satisfaction and there was no murmuring by the soldiers as to the treatment they received in those buildings. The program of entertainments never conflicted. All was harmony. The Y. M. C. A. building was sold to Arnold Hess some weeks ago. The Knights of Columbus building has been receiving $1000 a month from the National Headquarters for the up-keep, salaries and expenses of entertainments. A Catholic Chaplain was maintained together with three secretaries, one of whom was an athletic instructor.

Since the leaving of the Eighth Division, weekly dances were given with great success. Last Wednesday was the last entertainment, and the curtain fell and the K. of C. building will exist only in memory. It has served its purpose well and many a boy throughout the country will always cherish its memory. Good work was done by the Chaplains in the little chapel in the building. Over 280 soldiers became members of the Catholic church and were converted to that faith. The Catholic and Protestant Chaplains worked together in both buildings. The Protestant Chaplains made their headquarters at the Knights of Columbus building, and the Catholic Chaplains visited the Y. M. C. A. building, and participated in the evening program. The committee selected by the National Committee appointed a good substantial committee and a meeting was had with the Y. M. C. A. people and sites were selected together and there was harmony from the start and a bond of friendship sprung up among the secretaries that resulted in so much good to the soldiers. The first important case at Camp Fremont tried by Court Martial, the Commander of the Camp appointed a Catholic Chaplain and a Rabbi to defend the prisoner. Thirteen advocates sat upon the case. The prosecution was represented by a young advocate, who was formerly a district attorney in some county in Colorado. The prisoner was charged with several offenses and tried for all at the same time.

The Rabbi was a noted speaker and the Catholic Chaplain was a noted instructor in international law, but a very poor speaker. Between them both the prosecution had to call in extra help. The Rabbi spoke two days and was well fortified with points and authorities furnished by his associate. The result was that the prisoner was acquitted of all charges but one. The record made by the defense was so favorable to the prisoner on law points that the case was reversed by the Western Department and the prisoner set free. Aftr that the Chaplains were appointed as attorneys for defendants.

RAY HANLEN WRITES TO SISTER FROM FRANCE

Ray Hanlen, brother of Mrs. M. A. Sharkey of Redwood City, writes his sister as follows:

Dungenheim, Germany, December 25, 1918.—Christmas Dad.—The day of happy memories. I hope you are all enjoying a Merry Christmas and how I wish I could be with you.

Had a card from Lena today; said she hadn't heard from me. Surely some of the mail must go astray as I have been writing to all of you at every opportunity and Lena's card received today is the only mail I have had from California in six weeks, except some copies of the Chronicle, of which I got five in one mail. No doubt our mail will catch up to us some of these days and it would be small wonder if some of it did get lost, at the rate at which we have been moving since we came over here. It has been one jump after another ever since landing at Bordeaux last spring. A three-day stop near Bordeaux, three days' train ride to Calais, two days there and off to Samer where we were brigaded with the British for a few days, over to Chateau-Thierry where we got continual action all the way up to the Vesle river, moving forward nearly every day, a fifty mile march and a day's train ride to another front, stopping for a week's intensive training on the way, up to the St. Mihiel salient and back again immediately and up to Dead Man's Hill and Hill 304, made famous at the first battle of Verdun, for a month of as tough campaigning as any one could wish for, back again to back up a French unit in an attack toward Metz and another trip to our own sector on the Meuse just as the Armistice was signed, is just a skimming over of some of the traveling done while the war was still going on. During al... time ou... et stay in one place ... s eleven ... s at Septsarges, near Montfancon in the Meuse-Argonne sector, and it was eleven days in which we were exposed not only to the fire from the front but also from the right flank, and anything that Jerry didn't use against us there was something he didn't know about, for he used every trick and device he knew to hold us back. After hostilities ceased we had a week getting ready for our next job which brought us up here. This march was something over two hundred miles through Lorraine, Luxumburg and over the mountains from the German border to the Rhine. So you can see that we have covered some territory.

At present we are located in a small town near Coblins, a few miles west of the Rhine, billited in houses and barns and getting along in fairly comfortable style. We are having a white Christmas as there is several inches of snow on the ground and the German youngsters are having a great time with their sleds. It has not been extremely cold as yet, although the weather has been very stormy. Have been very good of late as I was at mass on Sunday, also today, the first opportunities I have had for several months.

I saw the German Santa Claus on his ,or rather her, rounds last night. Instead of being the fur-wrapped individual so familiar to the American children, a young lady dressed in white from shoes up, and with a white veil over her face, did the Christmas honors. She was preceded to each house by another young lady ringing a bell to announce her coming, and accompanied by several others. The children of the family all sat by the Christmas tree and chanted Christmas carols while receiving their gifts. It made a very quaint and interesting ceremony.

We don't know how long we are stuck here, probably will be on our way within a couple of months at the longest. Well, sister, I will close for the present and if you do not hear from me as often as you think I should write please don't put all the blame on me as I too well appreciate hearing from all of you, to neglect writing as often as I have an opportunity.

Best wishes to yourself and all the family, from

RAY HANLEN.

WORD FROM P. R. ESPINOZA FROM SUNNY FRANCE

Mrs. John L. Freeman has received the following letter from her brother overseas:

Sunny France, January 8, 1919.—My Dear Sister: Your two most welcome letters were received and also a nice Christmas card, and I was so glad to hear from you again, and also glad to hear you are all well. I was worried about the flu, but I hear now it is about over, that's good it makes me feel much better. I am in the best of health myself, and also getting along very nicely. We are now taking life pretty easy since we cleaned up on the old Kaiser. We cleaned him up right. I won't tell you much about it now, so as when I get home I will have lots to say and tell you about the war. I was right in among them but they couldn't shoot straight. I got by without a scratch.

When I was going over the top it put me in mind of when I used to h... jackrabbits at home. When th... ld see u... ing, they would get up ... d run lik... —. Well it is over with now, and there is not any more to worry about and I can say, Dear Sister, when I get back that I did my bit as long as it lasted. So now we are getting ready to go back to the good, old U. S. A. again. We may leave sometime this month or next. I will write before we leave and tell you more about it, so don't worry, Dear Sister, I will be with you in a short time.

I just received a letter from Brother Will and also from Mrs. Davis, I sure was glad to hear from her. I have received lots of mail and it sure makes me feel good.

Tell Babe that I received her letter and was glad to hear from her. I did not answer it as I lost her address, so the next time I write to you I will put it in your mail, my best wishes to John. Kisses to yourself and don't worry. As ever your truly brother,

PHILIP R. ESPINOZA.

BURGLARS
Will Not Visit Homes Where Electric Lights Are Numerous and Burning

Recently the home of a prominent resident of a nearby city was burglarized three times within a short space of time. The burglar was arrested and the owner determined to learn, if possible what prompted this unusual series of robberies.

"It was the only house on the street that was dark," said the burglar. "Take a tip from me. If you don't want burglars, keep some lights burning at night."

New wiring devices make it possible to flash on every light in your house and garage from a switch beside your bed. What better burglar insurance and protection can you carry? When you go to the garage at night you can press a switch in the house and all the garage lights go on. When you return later with your car, press a switch in the garage and the lights in the house flash on.

Ask your electrical contractor or dealer to show you how these wonderful new devices operate.

CALIFORNIA AND CALIFORNIANS

BY GENERAL JOHN F. SHEEHAN

John C. Fremont, "The Pathfinder."

To make this history complete it is necessary to refer to the part taken by John C. Fremont in wresting California from the Mexicans and adding another star to the flag of the Union. Subsequent events have made Fremont historically prominent; but the greatest achievement of John C. Fremont was in winning the love of a brilliant woman, Jessie Benton, daughter of the author of "Thirty Years in the Senate," the distinguished Senator from Missouri Thomas H. Benton. The term "Pathfinder" was unjustly applied to him, for the path from the Missouri to the Pacific was found by Lewis and Clark before Fremont was born and was trodden by many hardy pioneers such as Jeddiah Smith, George C Yount, Joseph R. Walker, Joseph B. Chiles, John Bidwell, Josia Belden, Kit Carson, Chas. M. Weber, founder of Stockton and others, before the young engineer penetrated the far west.

John Charles Fremont was born in Savannah, Georgia, of French parents, January 21, 1813, and lived to be 77 years of age, dying in New York in 1890. He was educated in Charleston College, and in 1836 was appointed a professor of mathematics in the U. S. navy. In 1838 he received an army commission as Second Lieutenant of Topographical Engineers (never having been a West Pointer as many supposed.) He was married to Jessie Benton in 1841. In 1842 he proposed a geographical survey of the far west, and received the support of his influential father-in-law, who had been reconciled to the marriage. The Fremont expedition started with 28 men. Reaching the Rocky Mountains the Fremont Peak was ascended and proclaimed (13,570 feet high.)

In 1843 a second expedition set out for the Pacific Coast, 39 men comprising the party. They stopped at Salt Lake ,proceeding thence to the Calumbia River and Fort Vancouver. Winter coming on the party crossed the Siskiyou Mountains into the Sacramento Valley, California, and rested at Sutter's Fort, returning East in the spring of 1844 via a southern route.

Fremont's third expedition was organized at Fort Bend on the Arkansas River, Colorado, in August, 1845. The force consisted of 62 men, including six Delaware Indians, nearly all western bred young men who were equal to any task from driving a six mule team to skill with rifle or Bowie. The writer personally knew two of this hardy band and they were men of worth and sterling qualities. Jerome C. Davis, after whom Davis, Yolo county, was named, afterwards became a prominent figure in California affairs. When he came with Fremont—he was 22 years of age, and died as City Trustee of Sacramento in 1881. The other, Charles Stewart, was a native of Kentucky and died at the Veterans' Home in Napa county, November 17, 1913, at the age of 95. The famous scout Kit Carson also accompanied Fremont on his expeditions across the plains. The party halted at Walker Lake, Nevada, November 27, 1845. Fremont with a small party proceeded over the Sierras to Sutter's Fort while the main body went south and entered the San Joaquin Valley by way of Walker's Pass and Kern river Fremont visited Yerba Buena and Monterey and was entertained by Leiderdorff and U. S. Consul Thomas O Larkin.

The two divisions of the expedition joined forces in February 1846 near San Jose, and marched toward Monterey. The Californians, ever distrustful of the Americans, deemed this move an "invasion" of their territory and ordered the invaders to depart, at risk of being driven out by froce. To this demand Fremont demurred and marched to the summit of Gavilan Mountain, which divides San Juan and Salinas. He "threw up fortifications" and raised the American flag, but the California General Castro was watching him, although not daring to attack. Fremont marched his men to Sutter's Fort, thence north to Peter Lassen's ranch, where they had a fight with Indians. While on his way toward Oregon he was overtaken by Lieutenant Archibald E. Gillespie of the United States navy, who was the bearer of secret dispatches from the U. S. war department. The result was that Fremont rtraced his steps, and on May 30, 1846, we find the Fremont party encamped near Marysville Buttes, where the Commander consulted with Wm. B. Ide and others who formed the Bear Flag party, and whose proceedings are noted in another chapter. While Fremont encouraged the Bear Flag people, he did not openly join in the movement until after Sonoma had fallen and Vallejo was arrested. At this time it was not known in California that the United States and Mexico were at war ,and Fremont had been severely criticised for his part in the revolutionary proceedings. It has been even charged that he would not have been averse to taking the presidency of the Bear Republic.

In July, 1846, after Commodore Sloat had claimed California for the United States and General Castro was organizing the California forces in the South. Fremont left Sacramento with 160 men and two field pieces and reached Monterey on July 19th. There was a disagreement between Commodore Sloat and Fremont but on the retirement of the former and the subsequent in command of Commodore Stockton, the latter authorized Fremont to proceed south with his force after Castro. He sailed for San Pedro, and marched to Los Angeles with 350 men. Castro and his army having faded away Leaving Lieutenant Gillespie at Los Angeles with 50 men, Fremont and Stockton returned to the north. But the "conquest" was not complete, for the Californians gathered in good ly numbers and Lieutenant Mervine of the navy met with defeat in an engagement near San Pedro. Colonel Fremont rendezvioused at San Juan with 428 mounted riflemen and one company of artillery. Louis McLane, years afterwards very prominent in California affairs, manager of Wells Fargo & Co., and first president of the Nevada bank of Flood, Mackay and Fair, was captain of one of the companies. In the meantime there had been an engagement at Natividad, six miles from Salinas, between forces of Captain Burroughs and Manuel Castro, with loss of life on both sides. In January 1847 Fremont marched to Los Angeles ,where Don Andreas Pico made terms. On the 19th of January, Commodore Stockton took it upon himself to appoint Fremont Governor of California and peace reigned until the arrival of General Stephen W. Kearney overland via. Arizona and the Colorado desert. General Kearny was the first officer authorized by the authorities at Washington to assume formal command of the military and civil affairs in California (described elsewhere) he issued orders to Fremont, sending him a copy of his instrutcions from the Secretary of War Fremont consulted Commodore Stockton and both agreed to ignore General Kearny. The latter repaired to Monterey where he was joined by U S. troops by transport from New York among whose officers were Lieutenants E. O. C. Ord, Wm. Tecumsah Sherman and Harry W. Halleck, all of whom became leading general officers of the Union army in the war of the Rebellion. Commodore W. B. Shubrick had superceded Commodore Stockton as Commander of the Pacific Naval Fleet, and being in Monterey Bay, General Kearny was at once recognized as the proper Commander of California. Accordingly orders were issued to Fremont and that officer repaired to Monterey to meet General Kearny, when after a stormy interview the former promised to obey orders. Fremont had been issuing orders signed by him as "Governor of California." Colonel Richard B. Mason of the First Dragoons had been assigned to receive official papers and property from Fremont, but the latter was so insolent that Mason threatened to put him in irons. Fremont sent a challenge to Mason, but General Kearny prevented a meeting. In May 1847 General Kearny turned over affairs civil and military to Colonel Mason and went East, accompanied by a number of officers and men, including Fremont. When at Fort Leavenworth, General Kearny ordered Lieutenant Colonel Fremont under arrest for "mutiny, disobeying of orders and conduct prejudicial to good order and military discipline." He was tried by court-martial at Washington, being defended by his father-in-law, Senator Thomas H. Benton.

The military court found Fremont guilty on all charges and sentenced him to dismissal from the service. President Polk remitted the penalty but Fremont presented his resignation ,which was accepted on March 14, 1848. This ended the career of John C. Fremont in the army until the breaking out of the Civil War.

Fremont returned to California after the discovery of gold and on the organization of the State Government was elected United States Senator, taking his seat a few days after the admission of the State into the Union, September 1850. But he drew the short term and served but one winter in the Senate.

In 1856 there was a new national political party in the field, the Republican, and old Whig politicians being ignored, John C. Fremont, having acquired national fame as "The Pathfinder," was selected as the Presidential standard-bearer, but was defeated by James Buchanan, Democrat, Fillmore being a poor third in the race.

Fremont was a Californian in the 50's and indulged principally in speculation for a living, being out of the army. Ex-governor (Mexican) Juan B. Alvarado received in 1844 from Governor Micheltorena the grant known as "Las Mariposas," comprising ten square leagues or 44,586 acres. But the young Californian never really took possession of the great tract, and sold it to Fremont for $3,000; yet this famous grant did not enrich the "Pathfinder" but rather made him "poor indeed," as large tracts made many other Californians "land poor." The grant was confirmed to Fremont, and before he was compelled to part with it great mines had ben discovered on it, such as the "Josephine" and "Pine Tree," the towns of Mariposa, Princeton, Bear Valley, Bridgeport, etc., sprang up; squatters were numerous, and trouble and many fights fololwed, and the result was that about 1859 the great property was sold at sheriff's sale, leaving practically nothing to Fremont. It appears that for some time Fremont lived on the grant with his family.

On the breaking out of the Civil War Fremont was 48 years of age, and in 1861 we find him a Major General of U. S. Volunteers, with command in Missouri. But his career in the war for the Union was not a successful one, for again the ego predominated. He anticipated Lincoln's emancipation proclamation, and in the fall of 1861 issued a proclamation on his own behalf, confiscating property and declaring free slaves of rebels in arms, thereby greatly embarrassing the war President who promptly annulled the Fremont order and relieved the General from command. In 1862 General Fremont again had a command in West Virginia, but running counter to General Pope, whom he claimed to outrank, his army career for usefulness was at an end.

General Fremont was governor of the Territory of Arizona from 1878 to 1882, during the administrations of Presidents Hayes, Garfield and Arthur, and did not again appear in public capacity until restored by Congress in 1890 as Major General in the army and placed on the retired list, shortly before he died.

General Fremont wrote and published a book, two bulky volumes devoted partly to a description of his trips across the plains and largely to the flora of the country traversed. It reflected no more credit upon the author than did the personal book of General George B. McClellan upon the early commander of the Army of the Potomac.

But no matter what Fremont's short comings he is at least entitled to credit for having retained to the last the affection and loyal support of his faithful, brilliant wife Jessie Benton.

Mr. B. L. Coulter who is in charge of the C. C. Morse trial gardens here formerly held the same position with the Ferry people at Detroit, and Mr. Coulter also has four brothers who have been engaged in similar work all their lives. His brother, William, having succeeded him at Detroit, another, E. W., is contracting field man ,and still another, L. D., is in charge of the growing department for the Ferries Co., and his brother, O. L. who resides in Redwood is field man for the C. C. Morse company.

Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Shaffer have arrived from Ray, Arizona for a visit with Mrs. Shaffer's parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Botterell.

Mrs. Edw. E. Jones keeps posted on the price of eggs in all hen-fruit communities in the state and his discovered that she can secure them at Calistoga at the actual cost of production, plus parcel post charges. The service is prompt and efficient and hence the reason for not patronising home industry.

Mr. Newton Peck the horticultural inspector for the county, who always has his eye pealed for microbes of any kind, whether they come from Germany or any other country, has made several visits to San Carlos the past week for the purpose of inspecting the many shipments of trees which are coming to the residents here. If this line of business keeps up we will soon have the appearance of a second Santa Clara Valley, and we will also consider recommending that the Hon. Board of Supervisors increase the salary of our worthy inspector who lets nothing get by him.

Young Ansel Clarington Hulbert Jr. and Miss Eileen Quinn were the only scholars from the San Carlos schools who were prepared to enter the Sequoia High School, Redwood City, with the recent class and have their names dignified by the prefix of affix, student. Miss Quinn passed her examination at Christmas time but has been prevented from entering high school owing to illness; while Young Hulbert passed at the examinations recently held in Burlingame and at which time he made a fine record.

Owing to the inability of Mr. Philip P. Lawler, in charge of the school thrift department of the Bank of Italy to make his regular weekly visit to our schools, Mr. Frank F. Risso of the Redwood City branch was delegated to take care of the deposits this week and hence we had the pleasure of a visit from Mr. Risso who is very extravagant in his praise regarding our popular teacher and the bright thrifty children whom she is trying to direct into paths of usefulness and transform rather think that Mr. Risso enjoys the little outing that these trips to San Carlos affords him.

The Story of Little Juanita.

The story of little Juanita that appeared in the San Francisco Call of last week and written by Harry Peterson of Palo Alto was read with interest. The true story of the little Indian maiden appeared in the Times-Gazette some years ago. It was written by James T. O'Keefe for the Knights of Columbus bulletin and is herewith reproduced:

"On the southerly bank of the San Francisquito creek and not far from Stanford University is a lonely grave, marked with a little stone cross, around which lingers the memories of the days of long ago. But few are now living who remember the story of the once beautiful maiden who sleeps beneath this cross.

At the close of the Santa Clara Mission, many of the Neophytes, through fear, sought the fastness of the mountains while others took up the occupation of civilized life. Among those who pursued the latter was a family by the name of Gonzales. They located on a large tract of land near the San Francisquito creek, which now comprises the vast Stanford estate.

The happiness and spiritual guide of the family centered around the eldest child, a girl of eighteen years. They had christened her "Juanita." She was born at the Mission and grew up in that happy and pious environment, an accomplished, comely and religious girl. When the clouds of sorrow gathered around the unfortunate Santa Clara Mission, where her people had been happy, Juanita directed her Indian parents to go forth and find a new home and not yield to discouragement. They moved to the farm just below where Stanford University now stands. Her piety did not grow dim by the hardships of the new life. She gathered around her many of her people and taught them that beyond the grave there was a longer, better and brighter life. In the evening she recited the rosary in their midst and on Sabbath mornings she galloped off with the country side to Mass at Santa Clara.

Juanita was an artist at the guitar, and soon became the idol of the valley. Admirers came from afar to worship at her shrine, but she remained contented among her friends.

It will be remembered that the San Francisco Mission was the last to close. When the affairs of the Mission were settled (or rather confiscated for plunder) many from all sections visited the closing scenes.

Juanita had come with her friends to aid, counsel and assuage the sorrow of those she loved. On her return a number accompanied her. On the way down the El Camino Real a great storm arose and the rains fell in torrents and upon reaching the creek not far away from her home all forded the stream. She was the last to cross over, and midway in the creek her horse stumbled and she was thrown beneath. Before her companions reached her the gentle life of Juanita had fled. The body was recovered, and firmly clutched in her right hand was found the rosary beads.

Great was the sorrow of her beloved people, stricken but not dispirited, they bowed in humble submission to the will of God. The adobe home of the Gonzales family was the scene of mourning and prayer. A little grave was dug on the bank of the San Francisquito (named by the Padres as "Little St. Francis,") and with tender hands and devotion the remains of Juanita were laid to rest. The good Padres came from Santa Clara to pronounce the final benediction, and some loving hand placed above her head a little stone cross, the emblem of man's redemption. The death of this Indian maiden seemed to strengthen the faith of the country side. Her teachings, example and devotion had its effect, and many of the decedants of these families have become prominent in the history of California. A number of them went to Southern California and built up that great country.

Many years have since passed, seasons have come and gone, the stream still murmurs by the grave, the birds continue their sweetest songs, but the little stone cross to this day stands as a sentinel over the grave of Juanita whose life was gentle, whose womanhood was as pure as driven snow, and thus we may truthfully say that the noble work of the Padres of early California was not in vain.

The editor in childhood played near the lonely grave and knows its story well. Along about 1876 Senator Stanford acquired those vast possessions. One day while traveling along the creek he noticed the stone cross and when told of the story he notified the supenintendent not to disturb the grave, but to improve it and likewise to preserve the falling walls of the adobe buildings near by, which were once the home of the decedents of the Mission Indians. The Senator was a broad guaged man and loved the early history of California, its Missions and its traditions, and thus the grave of Juanita will ever be preserved ,and while the story of her life may be forgotten the little stone cross may lead to inquiry and perhaps unfold some of the beautiful life of the Indian maiden who sleeps on the bank of the Little St. Francis.

Much interest is being manifested in the Madri Gras that will take place at the Defender's Club at Palo Alto on Tuesday evening, March 4 under the auspices of the Ladies' Auxiliary of St. Thomas Aquinas church. Valuable prizes will be given for the best sustained character. No one should miss this big event. Admission 50 cents, men in uniform free.

The people of Menlo Park are receiving an object lesson in what they would get in the way of public improvements if the county became a part and parcel of San Francisco. After months of waiting the highway commission appeared the other day with a few loads or gravel to place on the sides of the highway running through town which had been covered with storm water all winter. The commission has been implored, have been asked to improve the drainage on the streets, but the petitioners have been givn a deaf ear always. This is just what would happen if the taxpayers were to petition the board of supervisors of San Francisco, providing this county was a part of the city, we would get nothing

William Morris, who buncoed a workman named C. W. Fisher out of $85 at Camp Fremont last week, was arrested at Belmont on Monday and the following day was held over by Judge Griffin of Redwood City to appear before the superior court. His bond was fixed in the sum of $2000.

Joseph Kelly arrived home from overseas duty on Thursday after an absence of nearly a year. He will be mustered out of the service in a few days. Young Kelly was with the famous 91st division and was only a few miles from the front when the armistice was signed, for days he heard the roar of the big guns on the battle line. He does not speak glowingly of France and the treatment of the soldiers there. Mr. Kelly is glad to be back to his beloved California. He thinks more of his glorious state for having visited foreign lands.

The dance given at the officers' club hall Thursday evening was largely attended by officers from the quartermasters' department and the base hospital. Over 100 participated in the dance. Young ladies from all parts of the peninsula were present.

The members of the Menlo Park Horticultural Society will give a card party in Trinity hall the latter part of the month. The date has not yet been fixed. The society is planning to make it an event long to be remembered.
